As a result of the 'demolition' of 1970 the names of the fallen from the St Ann's Well Road (St Ann's parish) area were lost. Consequently we resolved to identify as many of the fallen as possible in order to right this wrong and honour them.

The search revealed others honoured elsewhere, those incorrectly recorded and also many who enlisted, served and returned. Our project honours all these men.

Research continues - this may never be a completed project – for several reasons. Many records were lost during WW2 (known as the 'burnt' records). Also, prior to WW1, hundreds of Nottingham-born boys emigrated to other Commonwealth countries and served under the flags of Australia, Canada, South Africa etc. – research is ongoing in this area.

We acknowledge and thank the Nottingham City Council's Project 'Roll of Honour - St Ann's District Virtual Memorial', in particular David Nunn and his team of researchers with whom we have collaborated.

The research on enlisted men found to date is presented here in several lists:

Pages 1 – 82	By Servicemen's names (alphabetical)
Pages 83 – 184	By Street Name (alphabetical)
Pages 185 – 197	A list of typical occupations of these men

Our group maintains a website where details of this project are stored: <https://stannswellroad.weebly.com/ww1-centennial-project.html>

Over 270 streets have been remembered on the website – each has its own page complete with photographs and residence listings (Kelly's Street Directory 1956). Servicemen's details have been collated within each page with links to the Commonwealth War Graves Commission's records. Links are also given for those recorded within the Nottingham City Council's Project 'Roll of Honour'.
